CONCERNING SHOPPING.

Some Interesting and Valuable Suggestions for the Ladies.

[Mary Wager-Fisher, in Rural New Yorker.]

To go to "town" to shop or "trade" is for many country women an event of real importance and often of very great fatigue, especially where the wants are many and there is only a little money to cover them. To be obliged to select and to decide upon fabrics or furniture within a given time is particularly wearisome to women who, as a class, are not trained to decide quickly in affairs of business.

In order to shop expeditiously, you should begin a week or two beforehand and make a list of everything you need to buy, or hope to be able to buy. After this list is complete, revise it by putting groceries in a column by themselves, and do the same with "notions," which include needles, pins, thread, buttons, trimmings, etc., and classify fabrics in the same way. In making this revised list place at the top of the columns the most important articles—those that must be had at all events. Give yourself plenty of room, so that opposite each item you can note down the quantity required, with space also left for what you pay for it. With this prepared list in hand, you know very nearly what you want; nothing is forgotten and you are saved from confusion. In making your purchases first buy the material that is to be made up, then use the means left for trimming in order.

I have shopped in many cities and towns, and with all my shopping I have found that I get the best satisfaction and the most for my money by going to a first class place where there is no deviation from a fixed price, and where I have reason to believe that the firm or store is conducted on an honorable basis. I have never found it profitable to go from store to store hoping to find the same article at a less price. A good article is never "cheap," and it is reasonable to suppose that a large dealer can afford goods at a lower price than a small dealer can. But it is not wise to buy an article that does not suit you, and in order to be suited it is, of course, sometimes necessary to go from shop to shop. There is one sort of clerk from whom those who are not very strong minded are in danger of being imposed upon—the clerk that tries to build you up in buying what you do not want. To begin with, at the outset it is best to recognize the fact that the business of the clerk is to sell goods, but that you are by no means under obligations to buy. If you want to look at goods with a view to future purchase say so, and the clerk, if he is obliging, will show them to you cheerfully without urging you to buy at the time. No good woman will unnecessarily consume the time of clerks, as she does her own time too much to waste it.

In buying many articles, the buyer must judge of their quality, and under such circumstances it is best to trust to the experience and honesty of the person of whom you buy. Especially is this true of silks and the finer class of fabrics. There is nothing gained, as a rule, by pretending to be wiser than you are, or assuming to yourself capabilities that you do not possess. In ninety-nine cases out of 100 the average woman may as well buy black silk for her frock with her eyes shut and her hands tied as to look at it and finger it for half a day.

In buying ready-made clothing, look well at the sewing. If there are ruffles examine the hemming. If you are buying suits for children, ask for pieces of the same to pitch elbows and knees before having the articles worn, see that the buttons are well sewed on, and fasten the ends of all seams so that there will be no ripping.

In buying bonnets or hats, never invest in cheap white straw. Especially if children do not choose such, a white straw trimmed with cheap highly colored stuff and flimsy artificial flowers. Select, instead, a stout brown or black straw of good quality and simply trimmed. Such a hat will look well until worn out, and not be spoiled by rain or damp weather. If one child outgrows it it will do for the next one. Train your children to prefer plain substantial things to cheap and showy ones.

For boys from 3½ years of age and upward, it is fashionable as well as serviceable to make their drawers of the same material as that used for their frocks. If ready-made suits of cloth are bought you can find flannel of a similar color for the drawers.

Stockings are a very expensive item in a child's wardrobe, and any suggestion as to how the knees may be saved will, I am sure, be acceptable to mothers. "Creepers" are sold at the shops for this purpose, but they can be home-made. Take a square or oblong piece of thick cloth, large enough to cover the knee well, two elastics are attached to each end to the opposite corners of the cloth—the elastics passing around the outside of the leg, one above and the other below the knee, being of a length to hold the cloth firmly to the leg. Another method some mothers employ is to take a part of the leg of worn stockings and draw it over the knee of the garment after his stockings are on. A old stocking is also the best material to use for lining the knees of stockings because of its elasticity. It is an economy and a convenience to buy stockings of one color "year in and year out," as you then have to supply yarn of but one color for all the darning. "Odd" stockings can be paired and mended more quickly and satisfaction accomplished.

POLITENESS costs nothing, and is one reason why so many people get nothing else on their chance acquaintances.

TEACHER: "What are the principal races of men?" Smart boy at the head of the class: "Go as you please, sir."

IT was Pope who said: "An honest man does not hold opinions. He is held by them."

NICE EXPERIMENT FOR YOUNG FOLKS.

Roll up a piece of paper, a pamphlet, or to make a tube about nine or twelve inches long and an inch or so across. Put this tube to your right eye and look through at some object, attentively keeping both eyes open. Now hold up your left hand with its back toward you and bring it very near the lower end of the tube, looking at your hand with the left while your right eye is fixed on something through the tube. If you hit the right position, which you can do, by putting the edge of the hand against, not over, the lower end of the tube, you will be surprised to see very clearly the things beyond. It is a very easy, but most surprising little experiment, and will please old as well as young people. You will, of course, wish to know why this is so, why there seems to be a hole where there is none. The scientific journals are talking about this, but their explanations would hardly suit young readers. We usually look at the same thing with two eyes, and the two images make one in our mind. Here we separate the two eyes in an unusual manner, and the mind brings together the circle made by the tube for one eye and the hand seen by the other, and makes one of them. You can vary this in several ways. If, when looking through the hole in the hand, you stretch out the left thumb so that it will be seen by the right eye through the tube, the thumb will appear to be directly across the hole in your hand. Instead of looking at your hand, use a card; make a black spot on the card as big as a half dime, and look at it as before; the black spot will appear to be floating in the center of the hole, with nothing to hold it there. Another variation is to make a round hole in the card of the size of the half-dime; look at this hole with the right eye, so that the real hole will be in the imaginary hole; the hole will appear exceedingly bright, and surrounded by a ring of shadow.

CHINESE BABIES.

The Chinese have many very strange superstitions, but none more so than that concerning the demoniacal possession of their babies. If an infant from the time of its birth has frequent spells of crying, and is of a very peevish disposition, the parents conclude at once that Sam Kü Lok Po, as the hobgoblin is called, has taken up its abode in the child, while the baby's true soul is wandering somewhere in space. They thereupon take dried banana skin, burn it to ashes, and mix it with water, so as to make a sort of inky compound. The mother now dips her forefinger into the ink and paints a cross on the baby's forehead, with the words, "I paint this cross to drive thee [the demon] away."

Another method of exorcism is to blacken the infant's face. Banana skin does not necessarily form an ingredient this time; any ink will do. The parents wait until the babe is in a sound slumber, when they take the ink and blacken its face, with their fingers—a brush would not be efficacious. In a short time the demon which has taken possession of the child returns, preparatory to its awakening—for the soul wanders from the body during sleep, and is free—and seeing the blackened face, exclaims, "Lawk-a-mercy! this can't be I," or words to that effect, and decamps precipitately. The true soul, which has been waiting for an opportunity, approaches the dormant body. Now is the time for the parents to wash off the ink with all speed; the soul recognizes its true casement, and the babe awakes in a natural state. Woe betide it should not the ink have been washed off at the right moment, for then the true soul will, like the demon, fail to recognize the body, and sorrowfully leave it, and the little one dies in sleep. On account of the supposed possibility of such an occurrence, the parents seldom use this latter method, which is called "the face blackening," but prefer to make the cross on the forehead.

CARLYLE'S KIND HEART.

Carlyle walked a great deal in order to make his dyspeptic stomach a little reasonable. But sometimes when the great, homely and grizzly old man was walking, with his big eyebrows almost showing from under the brim of his slouch hat, and his long, old-fashioned coat was almost sweeping the sidewalk, he would stop and pick up a bit of cast-off bread from the street and place it on the curbstone, so that some poor man who came along might find it.

"Is THERE a letter here in a scented envelope for my wife?" he asked the Postmaster, while the green fires from his eyes made the office look like a leafy forest. "Yes, sir," answered the Postmaster, and he handed it out. The jealous man tore it open at once, when, lo and behold! it was the milliner's bill for $50. No succeeding chapters.

TOM MARSHALL'S SECRET.

"Tom Marshall, Richard Menifee and Frank Hunt were all brilliant men," continued Gov. Magoffin, as the conversation drifted in that direction. "Hunt came nearer being the equal of Clay than any man I ever knew. He was a wonderful man. Marshall had a wider reputation, perhaps. He was a singular compound. 'They talk about my astonishing bursts of eloquence,' he said to me one day, 'and doubtless imagine that it is my genius bubbling over. It is nothing of the sort. I'll tell you how I do it. I select a subject, and study it from the ground up. When I have mastered it fully I write a speech on it. Then I take a walk and come back and revise and correct. In a few days I subject it to another pruning and then recopy it. Next I add the finishing touches, round it off with graceful periods and commit it to memory. Then I speak it in the fields, in my father's hawk, and before my mirror until gesture and delivery are perfect. It sometimes takes me six weeks or two months to get up a speech. When I have one prepared I come to town and go to talking. I generally select a court day when there is sure to be a crowd. I am called on for a speech and am permitted to select my own subject. I seize hold on to the bannister or railing and confirm the impression that I am very drunk and fly mad, any piece. It astonishes the people, as I intended it should, and they go away marveling at my amazing power of oratory. They call it rhetoric, but it represents the hardest kind of work.' This was the way Marshall talked to his intimates, and I have no doubt he was telling the truth. Yet, in spite of his vanity and faults, he was a man of unquestioned ability and intellectual power of the highest and brightest standard."—Harrodsburg (Ky.) letter in Chicago Times.

ANCESTRY.

When Ben Franklin, a grimy young printer, was carrying his forms through the street one day, he met a young fellow of his own age, the son of an aristocratic family, who was so poor as to want a meal.

Franklin offered to find work for him in a neighboring shop, but received the haughty rebuff:

"The G——s are not fallen so low as to become mechanics!"

When Franklin was Minister to France, this man died a pauper in the Philadelphia almshouse.

Family pride of another kind was shown by a sturdy farmer in Congress, who, when an attempt was made to buy his vote on a certain question, replied:

"Sir, every one of my kin in the old graveyard at home would rise if I should touch that money! I would not dare to do it."

In countries where social rank, estate and title, all solid realities, descend in an unbroken line, there is some apology for family pride, and even in America it is natural for a man to take a keen interest in those whose blood and character are his inherits. As long as the knowledge that his ancestors have been truthful, honest, manly men, helpers in God's world, makes him more anxious to be himself honest, independent and useful, family pride is a help in his life.

But when, as is more often the case, we see a family dawdle weakly through life, unwilling to engage in trade or honest work, justifying their right to be alive by their far-off kinship to some titled or rich dead man, pride of birth is only a hindrance, and is a vulgar and absurd pretense.

Honor and fame from no condition rise,
Act well your part, there all the honor lies.

He drew his breath with a gasping sob, with a quavering voice he sang, but his voice leaked out and could not drown the accompanist's clamorous bang. He lost his pitch on the middle A, he faltered on the lower D, and foundered at length like a battered wreck adrift on the wild high C.—Musical Journal.

THE basil of Australia is so overfed by the multiplying of wild horses that they have to be shot down in common with rabbits and kangaroos. In one district an Arab stallion got away thirty years ago, and was never recaptured. He was a chestnut, and took a couple of colts with him, and it has been remarked that a large portion of the wild horses of that district are of his color. Horses have proved to be very old are occasionally seen far off in distant ranges. One man has shot 3,000 horses in two years.

THE last rays of the fast-sinking moon, falling upon his pale, intellectual features, when he suddenly withdrew his hand, leaping into the air, exclaimed: "I'd forgot it, Sally, I wish you couldn't use pins in your waist belt."

TERRA alba, or white earth, is used to adulterate white sugars, cream of tartar and other commonly-used articles. Its use tends to produce disease of the kidneys, bladder and stomach.

IN 1872 English manufacturers exported to the United States carpets to the value of £1,619,511. In 1879 the trade had fallen to £565,401.

Progress of Christianity.

The Rev. Dr. Dorchester delivered an address in Wesleyan Hall, Boston, on the progress of Christianity, Papal and Protestant, in the whole world, since 1500. Until the present century, said the lecturer, there were no trustworthy data of the world's population. Prior to 1830 it was variously estimated from 242,000,000 to 737,000,000. In 1800 it was reckoned at 1,000,000,000. Prof. Schem's estimate makes the present population 1,437,000,000. The progress of Christianity from the fourth or sixth century up to 1500 was confined almost entirely to Europe. The nominal Christians in the world in the third century numbered 5,000,000; up to the sixth century they had increased 30,000,000; in the tenth century 50,000,000; in the fifteenth century 100,000,000; in the last 300 years the increase has been 200,000,000, or as much as in the previous fifteen centuries. In 1880 there were 410,300,000 nominal Christians. In 1500 there were 80,000,000 Catholics, 12,000,000 Greek Christians, and no Protestants; in 1830, 116,000,000 Roman Catholics, 70,000,000 Greek Christians, and 42,000,000 Protestants; in 1880 the respective numbers were 209,200,000, 88,000,000 and 113,700,000, showing an increase of 80 per cent. among the Papists, 26 per cent. in the Greek Church, and 170 per cent. among Protestants. The total number of nominal Christians in the world in the year 2000 was estimated by Dr. Dorchester at from 1,700,000,000 to 1,950,000,000. The non-Christians living under Christian governments in 1500 numbered 100,000,000; in 1700, 155,000,000; 1830, 358,000,000; 1876, 685,000,000; divided as follows: Papal, 80,000,000 in 1500, 90,000,000 in 1700, 134,000,000 in 1830, 181,000,000 in 1880; Greek, 20,000,000 in 1500, 24,000,000 in 1700, 60,000,000 in 1830, 96,000,000 in 1876; Protestants, none in 1500, 10,000,000 in 1700, 194,000,000 in 1830, 418,000,000 in 1876. Of the 52,000,000 square miles of the earth's surface 24,000,000 are under control of Christian governments, and 20,000,000 under Pagan and Mohammedan. Of the area under Christian domination, 14,500,000 square miles are ruled by Protestant governments, 9,500,000 by Roman Catholic, and 8,503,000 by the Greek Church. But France, Italy and Mexico are in a transition state, and the next forty years will settle the question as to whether the 75,000,000 people are to be counted upon. In 1800 the Bible was printed in one-fifth the languages of the world; now printed in nine-tenths, three million times had been printed in 1800; 50,000,000 in from 200 to 250 languages and dialects have since been circulated. In the Sunday-schools in 1830 there were 2,000,000 officers, teachers and scholars; there are now over 24,000,000. In the Protestant foreign missions in 1830 there were 70,289 communicants; in 1850, 210,957; in 1880, 854,382. Besides those at missions not reporting, the aggregate will probably be 1,000,000 communicants and 2,500,000 nearer adherents. Of the 857,332 communicants, 663,813 were formerly Pagan and 93,519 Papal, Jewish, or Rationalistic.

An Enemy to Singing Birds.

The crow is exterminating the singing-birds of New England. Few are the birds that escape his vigilant search, and fewer still the young birds that live to go to satisfy his ravenous appetite and fill his capacious maw. I have watched and cursed them for years. I have seen them pounce upon the nest of the lark and of the plover; I have seen them leaving the nest of the robin with the young in their beaks. For several years I watched the return of a pair of robins to an old apple tree near my house, where they had built their nest and reared their young. One morning I heard the piercing cry of the old birds, foreboding danger and distress. I ran to the window just in time to see a crow fly from the tree with a young robin in its mouth. In less than five minutes the crow returned, dived into the tree, and this time the last of my half-grown robins was borne away.—Detroit Free Press.

His Little Mistake.

Merimee, in his "Letters to [illegible]," tells a good story of Mrs. Caroline Norton and Lord Sudbury, whom she had captured at a charity fair to purchase some trifle at an exorbitant price.

"Don't you know," said his Lordship, defending himself feebly, "that I was the prodigal son?"

"No," was the answer; "I thought you were the fatted calf."

Thought He Had Him.

Attorney—"Have you ever been in this court before, sir?"

Witness—"Yes, sir; I have been here often."

Attorney—"Ha, ha! Been here often, have you? Now tell the court what for."

Witness (slowly)—"Well, I have been here at least half a dozen times to try and collect that tailor's bill you owe me."

YORKTOWN.

Wednesday next, the 19th instant, is Centennial of the surrender of Yorktown, and the capitulation of Lord Cornwallis and his army—October 19th, 1781. This was the closing battle of the Revolutionary War, the English retiring to New York, where they were "bottled" up until peace was declared by the Treaty of Paris, 1782, between England and France, the latter refusing to treat unless the acknowledement of the "Independence of the United States of America" was therein stipulated. On the 25th day of November, 1783, the English troops evacunted New York, and, as the last boat shoved off from the Battery, Washington, and his Generals, at the head of the Continentals, marched into the city, by the Bloomingdale road, and took possession. The English flag was nailed fast to the staff, which was greased; but before the departing fleet reached the Narrows it had been replaced by the American flag, it being the last act of the Revolution,

In commemoration of the one hundreth anniversary of the "Surrender of Yorktown, the event will be celebrated by imposing ceremonies on the battle-field, and throughout the Union the Stars and Stripes and the Tri-color will be displayed; and English Flags will also float from many a staff, as an acknowledgement for the sympathy expressed by Queen Victoria and the people of England, upon the assassination of President Garfield. Ships of war, military, and citizens are wending their way to Yorktown. The troops on Governor's Island have gone. The Kearsarge is waiting at New York to receive the German guests. The Government guests are representatives of LaFayette, De Grasse, Rochambeau and Steuben. The eldest male representative of De Grasse is T. A. Fowler, of Orange, N. J.

The national days are from the 19th to the 21st. It is estimated that there will be 100,000 people outside of the camps. There are not sleeping accommodations for over 30,000 and most of these are now crowded into barns, tents, etc. The visitors who have arrived are greatly disappointed. The most exorbitant prices are charged for everything. Rooms without board are to be $10 per day. Twenty thousand military are expected. The most attractive feature will be the French visitors. They will be quartered at the Morse House. This historical place was the scene of the capitulation of Cornwallis. Yorktown is a small place, has a few houses, and the residents are low negroes. The nearest railroad station is distant 25 miles.

The London Times, commenting on the forthcoming centennial celebration of the surrender at Yorktown, says: We have quite as much reason as the Americans to share their centenary thanksgiving, since that event only forced the Government to acknowledge, what everybody knew, that the war we were waging was hopeless.

On Thursday evening the German guests were received in New York by an immense and imposing procession. This week like honors were shown the French at Baltimore.

SURRENDER OF YORKTOWN.

At noon, October 19th, 1781, we have the first act of surrender. Yorktown changed hands. Two redoubts on the left of the enemy's works were at that hour taken possession of by detachments from the allied army. Colonel Richard Butler commanded the American and the Marquis Laval the French party, each of one hundred men. At two o'clock we reach the closing scene. The army of Cornwallis marched out as prisoners of war, grounded their arms, and then marched back. Accounts agree in describing the display and ceremony on the occasion as quite imposing. The British appeared in new uniforms, distributed among them a few days before, and it only required the flying of their standards to give their march the effect of a holiday parade. But their colors were cased, and they were prohibited from playing either a French or an American tune. This was the return of a compliment, a piece of justifiable as well as poetic retaliation on the part of the Americans for what the enemy were pleased to command when General Lincoln was compelled to surrender at Charleston the year before. The matter came up at the meeting of the commissioners. "This is a harsh article," said Ross to Laurens.

"Which article?" answered the latter.

"The troops shall march out, with colors cased, and drums beating a British or a German march."

"Yes, sir," returned Laurens, with a touch of sang froid," it is a harsh article."

"Then," said Ross, "if that is your opinion, why is it here?"

Whereupon Laurens, who had been made prisoner at Charleston with Lincoln's army, proceeded to remind Ross that the Americans on that occasion had made a brave defence, but were ungallantly refused any honors of surrender, other than to march out with colors cased and drums not beating a British or a German march.

"But," rejoined Ross, "my Lord Cornwallis did not command at Charleston."

"There, sir," said Laurens, "you extort another observation, it is not the individual that is here considered; it is the nation. This remains an article, or I cease to be a commissioner."

Nothing more was to be said; the article stood, and the enemy marched out with colors cased, while the tune they chose to follow was an old British march with the quite appropriate title of "The World Turned Upside Down"

As the prisoners moved out of their works along the Hampton road, they found the French and American armies drawn up on either side of the way, the Americans on their right, and extending for more than a mile toward the field of surrender. The French troops presented a brilliant spectacle in their white uniforms, with plumed and decorated officers at their head, and gorgeous standards of white silk, embroidered with golden fleurs-de-lis, floating along the line. The Americans were less of an attraction in outward appearance, but not the less eagerly eyed by their late antagonists. Among the war-worn Continentals there was variety of dress, poor at the best, distinguishing the men of the different lines; but, to compensate for lack of show, there was a soldierly bearing about them which commanded attention. The militia formed in their rear presented a less martial sight, so far as clothing and order were concerned. But all these men were conquerors, and their very appearance bespoke the hardships and privation they and their States had undergone to win in the struggle. At the head of the respective lines were the commanding generals, nobly mounted—Washington, Rochambeau, La Fayette, Lincoln, Steuben, Knox, and the rest. Leading the British came General O'Hara instead of Cornwallis. The latter pleaded illness, but he sent his sword by O'Hara to be given up to Washington. As O'Hara advanced to the chief, he was referred to Lincoln, who, upon receiving the sword as a token of the enemy's submission, immediately returned it to the British general, whose troops then marched between the two lines to a field on the right, where they grounded their arms.

The French fleet without the co-operation of which the magnificent manoeuvre, of which the feint on New York was the beginning and the surrender of Yorktown the close, could not have succeeded, was the most formidable naval armament that had ever been fitted out by France. The Count De Crasse, the admiral in command, sailed from the port of Brest on the 22d March, 1781, with a convoy of 150 ships valued at thirty millions of livres. The shores were lined by thousands of people as the fleet sailed into the offing, and the Minister of Marine went up in person from Versailles to witness its departure. By the close of April it was before Martinique and broke the British blockade.

On the 5th August, De Grasse sailed from St. Domingo, his pennant hoisted on the Ville de Paris, a magnificent three-decker of 104 guns. Stopping at Havana he took a supply of coin, and through the Behama Channel, came to anchor in Cheaspeake Bay August 26th. Upon the evening of his arrival he was boarded by an officer whom Lafayette had posted at Cape Henry, to inform him of his own position; of that of Cornwallis, and of the expected arrival of the allied armies. The land forces he brought from the West Indias, 3,000 in number, were at once embarked in transports and sent up the James River to Jamestown, where they arrived on the 27, and made a junction with Lafayette's command. The two armies marched next day to Williamsburg, and with an observing corps at Gloucester, commanded every avenue by which the escape of the English was possible. But it must not be imagined that no efforts were made to frustrate the purposes of the French Admiral. On the 5th the English squadron was signaled off the Capes, and De Grasse immediately went out with his fleet, twenty-four ships and two frigates, carrying 1,826 guns and met the British under Admiral Graves, with twenty-one ships, carrying 1,694 guns. A sharp action ensued, in which the English were worsted, the Terrible, one of their best ships, being so badly crippled that it was great difficulty to keep her afloat, and four others seriously damaged. The fleet manœuvered from the 6th to the 10th, the English avoiding a general engagement, and finally sailing northward, leaving Admiral DeGrasse in peaceful mastery of the Bay. On his return to his position behind the shelter of the Middle Ground bank, he found the Count de Barras, who had brought down his vessels and the contingent of troops and heavy artillery which had been left at Newport, Rhode Island, safely at anchor, having passed the British fleet unobserved. No further efforts were made by the English to interfere with the operations of the Allies until October 24th, when a squadron of twenty-five ships of the line, with Sir Henry Clinton and 7,000 troops on board, appeared off the Capes; on the fleet was Prince William Henry, later the sailor King William IV. To his chagrin, Clinton found that it was too late, and returned in dismay to New York. The wind not favoring, De Grasse did not attempt to pursue.

The presence of De Grasse on the American coast was but an incident in the campaign laid out for him by the French Government, and, after the capitulation of Cornwallis, he made haste to sail to the West Indies, where he had an appointment to meet the Spanish admiral, to take part in a concerted attack on the British posts in the Islands. Taking on board the Marquis de St. Simon and his troops, he sailed out of the Bay on the 5th of November.

Taxes.—In another column, under New To-Day, Sheriff Showers gives notice that the taxes are due.

CAR-SICKNESS.

A Piece of Paper "Works Like a Charm" in Preventing It.

Many persons, especially ladies, are great sufferers from that form of nausea and headache known as "car-sickness." A journey by rail has for them all the discomfort and suffering that an ocean voyage has to the majority of travelers. The effects of the motion of the cars range from a mild disturbance of the stomach and accompanying headache to "deathly sickness," with intense nausea and complete prostration, according to the condition and sensativeness of the victim. In its lightest form the sensation is sufficiently unpleasant to make travel by rail thoroughly disagreeable; in its worst, and by no means uncommon type, it invests this necessary and convenient method of journeying with dread and despair.

A simple and harmless preventive of car-sickness has recently come to the knowledge of the writer, under circumstances that leave no doubt of its efficacy with some persons; and if the remedy will work equally well in other cases the knowledge of it ought certainly to be spread abroad. It is at least worth a trial by all who suffer this inconvenience in traveling. A lady who had occasion to take a short trip on the Lowell R. R.—and she never travels by rail for pleasure—was, as is usual with her, as thoroughly sick as ever a landsman is on a "heaving deep," by the time she had ridden a dozen miles. The conductor of the palace car, who was apparently familiar with such cases, told the sufferer's companion that a sheet of writing paper worn next to the person, directly over the chest, was a sure preventive of the trouble in nine cases out of ten.

He had recommended it to hundreds of travelers and rarely knew it to fail. The prescription seemed very like a "charm," a horse chestnut carried in the pocket to ward off rheumatism, or a red string around the neck to prevent bleeding at the nose. But it was simple, and could at least do no harm. For the return trip a sheet of common writing note paper was fastened inside the clothing, as directed. Result—a perfectly comfortable journey, without a hint of the old sickness that had for years made travel by rail a terror. It was so like a superstition, or a happy accident, however, that the lady would not accept it as real until subjected to more severe test. This came in a journey to New York, and that hardest trial of all—a night trip in the "crowded" sleeping car. Both were taken in triumph. The "charm" worked. And the lady writes: "The day journey was a perpetual wonder and delight to me. I could stop and read, and look at the landscape through which I whirled, and do as other people do. And still I didn't feel ready to confess the cure until I had tried the sleeping—which has always been a horror to me. But even here the 'spell' worked. I had a hearty supper in the dining-car—as I kept it! Slept soundly all night, got up as comfortably, and dressed with a level a head and as steady a hand as though I had been in my own room. Read until breakfast time—a thing I have never done on the cars—and was hungry for my morning meal. It is really wonderful, almost too good to be real. For the first time in my life I have experienced the pleasure of traveling. I wish that conductor to be especially thanked."—New York Daily Times.

Old Inhabitants on the Weather.

"Some folks seem to think this is warm weather," observed old Daddy Wotherspoon to old Uncle Linkinbotham, as the two old inhabitants stood, last Thursday, before a thermometer that registered 90 deg. in the shade. "'Pears to me 'twas worse than this in the May of '28, wasn't it?"

"A heap worse," assented old Uncle Linkinbotham; "but that wasn't as bad as May of '22. You remember how the tin roofs melted and run off the houses, and we had to carry wrought steel umbrellas through the streets?"

"'Deed I do," rejoined old Daddy Wotherspoon, mopping his visage with some anxiety. "I was out hunting that spring, and we had to carry our powder in buckets of water to keep it from going off prematurely. Wasn't that the spring the hams fried on live hogs and the bill melted off the snow birds?"

"The same spring," said old Uncle Linkinbotham. "I know I was off fishing in Long Island sound, and the heat generated the water into steam so as to blow our boat clear over into the woods. That month was pretty warm, for I recollect how the forest out back of Flushing New York melted down, and I had a stream of liquid kindlings running right through my farm. One of my boys took a swig of it one day by mistake, and when he died in the fall we found his stomach full of splinters. Killed him."

"Yes, yes," murmured old Daddy Wotherspoon, steaming at every pore. "We used to hang meat and vegetables down my well, and they were cooked in ten minutes by the watch," and the ancient gentleman regarded his antagonist with some triumph.

"We tried that," said old Uncle Linkinbotham, "but the heat melted the wires the grub was hung on and the works of the clock run all over the floor, so we couldn't tell how long it did take to cook, and we used ice-water to do our biling with."

"Where'd you get your ice?" demanded old Daddy Wotherspoon, tying a handkerchief around his head to keep his ears warm.

"We just poured water on the fire and the fire was so much cooler than the atmosphere that the water froze in a minute. That's how we got so much ice. Don't you want to go and drink something to warm you up?"

"If we can get a little good old brandy, I'd like it," replied old Daddy Wotherspoon, with pale lips and clenched fist. "I'll take some proof brandy."

"Come along, then," retorted old Uncle Linkinbotham, contemptuously. "You may be able to stir your blood with that tipple, but this weather and the recollections of May, '22, makes me want some hot, spiced rum and a fur overcoat. To-morrow I'm a-going to put on extra flannels."

And the two old liars almost killed themselves that afternoon with hot drinks rather than admit that the Almighty could do things as well now as he did when they were boys.—Brooklyn Eagle.

TREE CULTURE ON WASTE LAND.

Hitherto the abundance of natural timber in this country has made it easy to dispense with timber culture, and for the most part our land owners have taken little interest in such slow-growing crops. This state of things, however, is rapidly passing away. The demand for special woods for manufacturing purposes is steadily and rapidly increasing, while the natural supply is diminishing and must ultimately become quite inadequate. Meantime, there are millions of acres of land suitable for timber culture and for nothing else, except poor pasturage, that our land owners are allowing to lie waste and idle for lack of a little forethought, and too frequently our would-be thrifty farmers will risk their surplus means in wild-cat speculations, promising but never yielding large and speedy returns, when the same money spent in planting timber would soon convert their worthless swamps and stony places into valuable properties.

A correspondent, writing from Wisconsin, tells of a piece of land that was planted with walnuts twenty-three years ago. The land was flooded every spring and summer, and was unfit for any ordinary cultivation. The trees are now from sixteen to twenty inches through, and have been sold for $27,000. No particulars are given as to the cost of planting the grove or the amount of attention it has had during the years of growth. There can be little doubt, however, that the investment was small in comparison with the return, and the land would otherwise have remained unproductive. To the country the timber crop was so much clear gain. It is clear that our national resources might be enormously increased by a similar utilization by timber culture of lands which are now left unused and unprodnctive, and the planters would find their groves a sure investment for the security of their family possessions than any savings-bank deposit.—Scientific News.

HIS MAIDEN EFFORT.

Disraeli's first effort in Parliament is thus described by one who saw and heard it:

"When Mr. Disraeli got up to reply to the great Irish athlete, Daniel O'Connell, who had just sat down, he looked as collected and pleasant as a bridegroom on his nuptial day. There was a moment of intense silence highly flattering to the youthful politician. He began in an easy flow of graceful execution, and his voice was clear and strong. I looked forward to a triumphant display of his powers, when, of a sudden as if it had been concerted, as doubtless it was, a loud chorus of discordant ejaculations broke forth from the Whig and Radical members that rose in volume and dissonance till the voice of the orator was quite drowned. He seemed in no wise disconcerted, but persistently began again and again. At last he appealed to the refractory members, and said that, as a matter of fairness, if not propriety, they ought to allow him to proceed, at least till he gave cause for interruption, and that nothing would induce him to take part in treating any honorable gentleman in the manner in which he was assailed. He saw at last it was useless to struggle against the uproar, which was only increased by the stentorian efforts of the Tory side of the house to sustain him; so, gathering himself up to his full height, with his eyes emitting fierce flashes of indignation, and in a voice of proud defiance, he exclaimed, as he brandished his right arm: 'Though I sit down now, the time will come when you will hear me.'"

Bismarck's Escape from Death.

Hard by, where the Kleine Maner strasse debouches into the Linden, Prince Bismarck had a narrow squeak for existence at the hands of young Blind, not many months before I first made the personal acquaintance of the eminent German statesman. It was not, however, till the autumn of 1867 that, one night during a long tete-a-tete with which he honored me in his old house in the Wilhelm strasse, he gave me a detailed and graphic account of his rencontre with Blind, and placed my finger on the bony excrescence which had developed itself on one of his lower ribs in consequence of the injury inflicted thereon by a bullet discharged from Blind's revolver at a moment when its muzzle was in actual contact with the Chancellor's body.

"I owe my extrordinary escape from death," he observed, "partly to the solidity and hardness of my rib, and partly to the strength of my muscles. Blind had scarcely raised his pistol when I grappled with him, and got his right arm in a tight grip, which I never relaxed until he was secured by a patrol of the guard. Of the five shots he fired while we were struggling, only the first, pointing to his side, "took effect. As I had my wits about me and managed to keep his pistol-hand bent outward, except just at the end of the tussle, when he succeeded in turning the barrel round on my body. But the bullet, though it stung me so sharply that I thought it had gone clean through me, only grazed off my rib. I ran a much more imminent risk from the fair-play instincts of an honest Prussian guardsman than I did from that foolish lad's revolver. You see, he was a smallish fellow, and I am rather a big one. While we were wrestling, my hat fell off, and I suppose my bald head proved a tempting object to one of the soldiers who ran up to see what was the matter during the report of the pistol; for this lusty fellow, perceiving a tall man, a stranger, ill-treating a short youth, raised his rifle, and would assuredly have brought the butt end down with a crash upon my bare pate had I not caught sight of his attitude in time to shout out, 'Hold on! I am Bismarck'—upon which he dropped his weapon in a much greater fright than even my own."—Swiss Times.
